Matrimonial Venture

If I live to be a thousand years old I shall never forget how a stranger took five of us in one day at Syracuse in a manner so slick that he walked off with our cash before we had a suspicion. It was a rainy, dismal afternoon, and a dozen men—agents, drummers, drovers, and others—were sitting about the office. Some one read a newspaper clipping about a bigmist who had seven wives, and pretty soon each one had an opinion to advance. Finally a well dressed, good looking man ventured the observation:

"I myself could have married a dozen women on an hour's notice. It's all in the first impression created."

Some agreed and some differed, and the discussion began to assume a more vigorous tone. By and by the same man again observed:

"You may think me conceited, gentlemen, but I'm only telling you what I know I can do. I've always had extraordinary luck with women. I'll venture to say that I can go down to the depot, pick out the best looking woman in the waiting room, and if she is not already married, that I can take her to the parson's inside of an hour."

There was a general laugh at this, but he looked very serious as he continued:

"Perhaps this crowd has some cash to lose on that? If so, let's talk business."

After a bit we came to an understanding. Five of us were to chip in $100 each against $500 of his money. We were to go to the New York Central depot, select a female, and if she proved to be unmarried, he was to persuade her into marriage inside of an hour, or forfeit his money. We could have raised a thousand dollars as well as half that sum, but he could not cover it.

Nine of us went down to the depot. Among the waiting passengers were seventeen females, but on looking them over our choice was limited to three. We finally selected a woman we believed to be a widow. She was fairly handsome, well dressed, and had two or three parsons on the seat beside her. We got seats near by, and then our number approached. He asked what time she was going out on, spoke about the weather, and to our surprise, was not rebuffed. Within ten minutes he asked if he was a widow, and she had scarcely answered in the affirmative when he began to plead his case. It was only forty minutes by the watch when he came over to us and said:

"Gentlemen, I'd like two or three of you to accompany that lady and myself to the parson's as witnesses to our marriage."

We went, and they were duly married and the stakes passed over. The lady acted as coy and shy and embarrassed as you please, and confessed that it was a case of love at first sight. They took a train two hours later, and when they were fairly off we learned that he was a horseman from Chicago, and that the woman had been his lawful wife for the past fifteen years.—New York Sun.

NEW DISTRESS SIGNAL.

A new shell, to take the place of all distress signals now used in marine signaling, such as rockets and firing of minute guns, which involve the loss of much valuable time, has lately appeared. It is intended that the shells shall be distributed about a ship, but particularly kept on the bridge within easy reach of the captain. When he desires to give a signal of distress, instead of losing time in loading and firing a cannon or touching off a rocket, he seizes a shell, pulls the cap off the detonator, scratches the fulminate with the rough end of the cap, and throws the shell overboard. In twenty-five seconds there is an explosion and a loud booming report is heard, while a column of water, flame and smoke shoots up at least 100 feet in the air. An extra appliance of a rocket is attached to the shell used at night, and this is thrown to a great height by the explosion and itself explodes in the air. The tin cylinders of the shell then float about on the water, and as they have the name of the ship stamped on them they serve in time of disaster to tell of the ship they came from.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

THE HUMAN EAR.—Few people realize what a wonderfully delicate structure the human ear really is. That which we ordinarily designate so, is, after all, only the mere outer porch of a series of winding passages, which, like the lobbies of a great building, lead from the world without to the world within. Certain of these passages are full of liquid, and their membranes are stretched like parchment curtains across the corridor at different places, and can be made to tremble like the head of a drum or the surface of a tambourine does when struck with a stick or with the fingers. Between two of these parchment like curtains a chain of very small bones extends, which serves to tighten or relax these membranes, and to communicate vibrations to them. In the innermost piece of all a row of white threads called nerve stretch like the strings of a piano from the last point to which the tremblings or thrillings reach and pass inward to the brain. A wonderful piece of mechanism, indeed!—St. Louis Republic.

"POISONED!"
Two hundred and thirty-six persons died recently from the effects of poison in ice cream and pastries flavoured with adulterated flavoring extracts. Do you want to be poisoned? Then be careful whose flavoring extracts you use. Select proper material. Food flavors require a thorough knowledge of chemistry, without which one assumes great risk of doing harm. Ask for Stonebraker's Concentrated Flavoring Extracts. They are the world's standard and are used in the best ice cream, cake, and confectionery.
